Clues are of six types: 1Normal cryptic (N). 2 Definition and letter mixture (DLM). Each clue contains both a definition (one or more words) and a mixture of the letters (beginning with the beginning or ending with the end of a word in the clue) of the required solution. Either definition or letter-mixture, which do not overlap, may come first. 3 Misprints (M). Half the clues contain a misprint of one letter only in each, occurring always in the definition part of the clue: their answers are to appear in the diagram correctly spelt. The other half are correctly printed but their answers are to appear in the diagram with a misprint of one letter only in each (never unchecked). Subsidiary indications in the latter lead to the misprinted answers as they appear in the diagram. 4 Playfair (PL). In a Playfair word square the code phrase (of three words in this puzzle), in which no letter recurs, is followed by the remaining letters of the alphabet O R A N G I doing double duty for I and J (see left). To encode a word E S T I C it must first be split into pairs of letters, e.g. CRITIC AL. Each pair is K B D F H then seen as forming the diagonally opposite corners of a rectangle L M P Q U within the word square, the other corner letters being the encoded form. VWXYZ Thus, in the example shown, CR gives SG (notGS, which RC would give). Where a pair of letters occurs in the same row or column of the word square, its encoded form is produced from the letters immediately to the right of or below each respectively. For the last letters in a row or column the first letters in the same row or column become the encoded forms. Thus IC is encoded as CE. When all the pairs are encoded, the word is joined up again: thus CRITICAL is encoded as SGCICEOP. 5 Right and Left (RL). Each clue is really two clues, side by side but not overlapping, leading to two answers as numbered. Either may come first; the solver must discover which goes where. The division is not necessarily marked by punctuation. 6 Wrong Number (WN). Each clue includes a one-word definition of the answer required at the number where it stands but belongs as a whole to a word of the same length elsewhere.

The Playfair code phrase must be deduced in order to complete the puzzle. It may be seen as a rough definition of the puzzle's title, which is encoded like the other PL entries and in which, as in the code phrase, no letter recurs. Competitors should submit with their solutions a normal cryptic clue to the bona fide compound formed from the title's first and third words (4,6).
